Mare Island Shoreline Heritage Preserve

Won’t you consider helping us open this “north shore” regional park of state and national importance to the public? Learn how and why in my letter. – Myrna Hayes

Donor and Sponsor Newsletter

An email on the road
Read the email letter from Raymond Andersen of Hudsonville, Michigan which was our “call to action” to open this special property up to the public sooner than later. And, good thing we took action. Ray died a little over a year later.

Where and what is the Mare Island Preserve?

The Mare Island Shoreline Heritage Preserve is 215 acres located at the south end of Mare Island in Vallejo California that formerly served as the U.S. Navy’s first Naval Ammunition Depot founded in 1857. The U.S. Navy’s oldest cemetery in the Pacific is also nestled in the Preserve on a gentle slope protected by towering old trees. Situated at the confluence of the Napa River, the Carquinez Strait and San Pablo Bay, the hilltop vantage point affords spectacular vistas of Mt. Diablo, Mt. Tamalpais and Mt. St. Helena, the Napa and Sonoma Valleys, 7 Bay Area counties and the Carquinez Bridges.

Michigan resident and Navy veteran Ray Andersen's poignant March 2008 email story of his failed attempt to gain entry to the Mare Island Naval Cemetery to pay his respects to the crewmen of the USS Boston buried there in 1892 was our inspiration for opening the Preserve to the public.

When Navy veteran Raymond Andersen who served aboard one of seven USS Boston’s in the U.S. Navy’s fleet, arrived from Michigan at the former Mare Island Naval Shipyard February 29, 2008 to pay his respects to crewmen of the USS Boston killed in an explosion at the Navy’s oldest ammunition depot, in June 1892, the gate to the U.S. Navy’s oldest cemetery in the Pacific was locked up. A large sign on the gate warned ROAD CLOSED and a security guard turned him away. Ray died April 7, 2009 never having visited the graves of those 15 young men ranging in age from 18 yrs, 3 months to 42 years.

No National Park in Solano County—Yet!!

While the East Bay Park District celebrates its 75th year in 2009, Solano County has announced the planned closure of Lynch Canyon, its newest regional park, one of only 4 regional park sites, due to budget cuts. The county’s two State Parks are also on the chopping block. Unlike a majority of counties in the Bay Area that are privileged to have a National Park site, Solano County has none. It’s not that Solano County doesn’t have history. Both the Benicia Arsenal and the former Mare Island Naval Shipyard have received the highest ranking National Park Service designates an historic site in America – the National Historic Landmark.
A guard told me the cemetery was closed but drove me up to the gate and left. I was stunned that I could not get in. Please understand it was heartbreaking to see the sign and not be able to get into the cemetery. I am sure you will do good things for the men buried there and I will continue to pray for them but I will never be able to go back as this is a one time thing for me. – Raymond Andersen, Michigan

“About a year ago I found, through a lot of digging, that there was a Monument to 12 men from the protected cruiser USS Boston, that were killed reloading ammunition at Mare Island. I felt sorry for these men, I guess through association. I really debated driving to California but felt I already had come 3800 miles what’s another 500. I stayed in Carpinteria, Ca a night and then traveled up towards San Francisco and Vallejo. I knew I was going to have difficulty finding the cemetery but what is an adventure if not for some difficulty. Upon arriving in Vallejo (Feb. 29th) I asked a few people in the street if they knew where the cemetery was and they did not. I stopped for gas and asked a girl at the station if she knew and she gave me some vague directions and I left. When I got to Mare Island, there was a lot of construction going on and I asked where the cemetery was, again no one knew. With all of the detours, I ended up at a college(?) and went in an Inn (navy club?) A guard told me the cemetery was closed but drove me up to the gate and left. I was stunned that I could not get in. Please understand it was heartbreaking to see the sign and not be able to get into the cemetery. I left really depressed. I drove all the way to Sparks,Nevada (I started the day by Santa Barbara). I just wanted to get away from there, I actually felt sick. I am still on my venture and am in Kearney, Nebraska at this time. I am sure you will do good things for the men buried there and I will continue to pray for them but I will never be able to go back as this is a one time thing for me. – Raymond Andersen

When I received Ray Andersen’s e-mail, I vowed never again. Never again would someone travel to the Naval Cemetery at Mare Island and find only a road closed sign. That week, I posted my home and cell phone numbers on the gate.

When I shared Ray’s e-mail with my friend, Alamo resident Sue Wilson, and vowed to open the property as a park beginning with once a month, she committed to helping me do just that. We were adamant that the public should visit and learn about this remarkable place in history so rich in natural treasures and stunning scenic beauty. Sue built a website that she and I continue to develop and maintain. We pieced together a Visitor’s Center in a former bomb storage magazine, even though since it has no electricity, the only light is from its windows and doorways. Sue bought a movie camera and now many of our programs and events at the Preserve are broadcast on Youtube.

Sue immediately set to work developing a written self-guided trail guide keyed to 13 stops along the 3-mile roundtrip to the hilltop vista point and beyond to bunkers facing west towards the Bay and Mt. Tamalpais. She bought a voice recorder and after months of work, has produced an audio tour featuring the stories of Sonoma resident Lorene Palmer Seward who grew up before, during and after WWII in one of the Preserve’s six Ordnance Worker’s Houses listed on the National Register of Historic Places. KPIX Channel 5 Eye on the Bay started its Napa River story with an interview with me at the Preserve in October 2008. In February 2009, Sacramento Channel 10 KXTV aired its “California Postcard” about the Preserve.

Young visitors to the Mare Island Naval Cemetery
Today, after a little over a year of once a month Second Saturday Access Days and two 150th anniversary events, more than 3,000 people have visited the Mare Island Shoreline Heritage Preserve. Individual donations have paid for our portable restroom and reprinting the trail guide each month. Numerous businesses and corporations have underwritten our 150th events with cash contributions and in-kind services.

Thanks to a handful of volunteers – and I am not exaggerating about it being a handful, as volunteers are hard to come by – the people of California can visit 98 acres of their land, off-limits to the public for more than 150 years.

Up until transfer to the State and its grant of the land through the State Lands Commission to the City of Vallejo in 2002, sensitive munitions manufacturing, storage and transport operations and more recent environmental cleanup of the property, made public access impossible.

Recommendations in December 2007 from the Mayor’s Taskforce described the steps to take to open the site as a regional park of state and national importance, however, the City of Vallejo and its master developer for Mare Island both declared bankruptcy in the Spring of 2008. Would that derail the opening of our park?

Sue and I are as ardent as ever about public access to the Mare Island Shoreline Heritage Preserve. In fact, we pretty much live, sleep, dream the Preserve. Our passion is paying off. We are confident that our obsession with this 98-acre hidden jewel of the “north shore” of San Francisco Bay with its mix of history, nature and spectacular scenery will soon be shared by many.

Why am I writing to you about this park? First, to invite you to visit on the second Saturday of every month. Sue or I will be there to welcome you. Or, give us a call and make an appointment to visit at another more convenient time for you. We are also writing to you because we are sure you will want to help us fund continued public access to this property. Here we have this incredible national treasure in our own backyard, yet it seems that all around us, the word is, due to budget cuts or lack of funds or lack of resources...however you want to spin it, “we can’t have this, we must cut that”.

You are the key to our future success and we are counting on help from our neighbors. This isn’t Sue’s and my park. It’s “our” park in the greatest intent of the word.

We honor its history as a gathering spot for early Native Californians, a protected and abundant source of spring feed for Spanish mares and their foals, as well as regularly visited by up to 3,000 tule elk which swim across the river to forage. It has served as the Navy’s earliest ammunition depot, cemetery, lighthouse and radio communications facilities in the Pacific. For its contribution to U.S. Navy and maritime history, it is designated by the National Park Service as a National Register Historic District contributing to the Mare Island National Historic Landmark, their highest ranking for a historic site in America.

Now, the property belongs to all Californians. That means we all have a rare chance to preserve, restore and protect this national treasure, now.

If you don’t think there is anything you can do, check out our video on Youtube about the Weston Solutions, Inc. Make a Difference Day at the Preserve June 17, 2009. Nearly 200 managers from throughout the nation spent 3 hours in our Preserve. They repainted the Naval Cemetery fence and documented the condition of the weathered old gravestones of the 922 individuals buried there with digital images and old fashioned stone rubbings. They repaired and painted picnic tables and put up safety fencing at the old tennis court converted to picnic grounds. They repainted the benches located at a geological marker used as a survey point placed in 1852 by the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, the precursor to NOAA. They replaced Sue’s and my homemade markers with 14 new signposts and interpretive displays along the trail route. They laid mulch along the dirt road to the site of the former lighthouse.

We invite you to contribute cash and in-kind support to underwrite our upcoming 2nd Annual Mare Faire, Saturday, August 8 and Sunday, August 9, 2009. Funds will be used to rent tables and chairs, portable restrooms, a sound system and a generator, design, print and distribute programs and marketing materials, create new directional and informational displays, provide refreshments and hire event support staff, musicians and horse and carriage rides.
Our needs and wishes

The purpose of our request for sponsor contributions and donations is so our volunteers can utilize “Citizen Science” to document the natural, archeological and historic resources in the Preserve and to preserve, protect, restore and introduce these precious treasures for the enjoyment of our visitors, especially for all of the people of California.

Go Live, Get out and Do It!

In the future, our park with such a unique significance to our state and nation, will grow in size and complexity with addition of land from the Navy. For now, the Preserve is a paved roadway trail with short detours, unmatched vistas and quiet spots, glimpses of the past, and ample chances to hike, bike, contemplate, read, learn, paint, fly a kite, play music, and even practice tai chi or take a nap. It is that serene and splendid! Help us make visitor serving improvements.

NEEDS: Benches, weeding tools, a wood chipper, gloves, picnic tables, safety and directional signs, water stations, permanent accessible restrooms

Explore and Experience

Whether touching a bomb, exploring a former bunker, or discovering a rare flower found no where else, the Preserve is an ideal place to explore and to experience both the historical and natural world while imagining for instance, what might be fun to do in an old bunker, now—music, camping, a haunted house. Your donation will underwrite youth and adult outings, guided explorations of the wildlands and cultural sites and art and music programming in the Preserve for people of all ages.

NEEDS: Supplies, training, staff, electronic equipment like geocaching and GPS units to engage especially kids, program development and advertising

Learn and Live the Stories

Most people learn about and visit the Preserve for the first time by attending our events, guided outings and hikes. When they get here, trail guides and audio tours, as well as interpretive and interactive exhibits at our Visitor Center will ensure a quality experience. Podcasts and and movie links on our website invite and inform nearby residents as well as interested folks from far away. Help us host guest speakers, offer living history programs and events and improve our exhibits and tours.

NEEDS: AV equipment, event equipment rentals, living history actors and costumes, supply purchase, honorariums and services such as carriage rides

Preserve and Protect

The Preserve is the “original” Mare Island, one of 48 Islands of San Francisco Bay and possibly the most undiscovered. It remains a mystery. Our volunteers, even as amateurs, are finding natural, historical and archeological evidence each time they visit. It is also the most “disturbed” by public works. Overrun by invasive plant species, a dangerous fire hazard, the Preserve is ripe for restoration to a more native and durable landscape. Water-harvesting and storage and off-the-grid electricity generation are essential for sustainable operations.

NEEDS: Mowing, brush removal, tools, GPS units and restoration and design skills

Remember to Remember

Certainly some of the most ambitious efforts in the near term will be to: analyze the condition of the Naval Cemetery and seek funding for its restoration; complete a master plan based on the existing documents prepared for the City of Vallejo by its appointed Taskforces; seek funding for operations and management, including infrastructure development and the critical work of planning for intensive preservation work on the oldest Naval Ammunition Depot and Naval Cemetery in the Pacific.

NEEDS: Historic preservation specialists, architects, planners, contractors with historic specialties, estimators

Donations of any amount will underwrite specific programming and purchase equipment and supplies. Just as important is the donation of in-kind services from mowing to technical design and writing, to the loan of a corporate executive. Volunteers with all types of interests and expertise are essential. Imagine all it takes to build a park—think “Habitat for Humanity”. From preparing food, to painting, to engineering.
You can help make our dreams come true

Your contribution to our volunteer led campaign to open this remarkable parkland for the public, will go a long ways towards creating an authentic and energizing experience for the public who visit this most unique of places in the region and in this country.

Prior to opening the facility on a permanent basis, a master plan that includes careful analysis of the existing archeological, historical and natural resources and a plan to preserve, restore and operate the site, must be completed. In the interim, we have specific needs that will facilitate year round use and continued opportunities for volunteer conducted eradication of invasive species such as fennel, thistle and french broom and enhancement of native plant and wildlife habitat, as well as repairs to the infrastructure that already exists. Funds are needed specifically for the design and installation of permanent restroom facilities, a generator and eventually the installation of solar panels to provide lighting and meet other electrical needs for the Visitor Center and nearby bunker we intend to convert for special events and fundraisers, lighting for the Visitor Center, asphalt sealing and repairs to the 2 miles of existing roadways, tree pruning and chipping/grinding, excellent interactive exhibits and a broad marketing effort.

Our wish list for specific equipment includes: work gloves, shovels, rakes, picks, pruners, hand-saws and power equipment including a chainsaw, weed-eaters and at least one or more heavy-duty lawnmowers for attacking hillside fennel and invasive grasses. We need a 3,000-4,500 kw generator, preferably one that is “whisper” quiet, as these former munitions storage facilities really transmit sound and one that is fuel efficient too, as we are totally dependent on donations for our operations!

Who is the Mare Island Trust?

We are committed to the public’s access to and its enjoyment and experience of Mare Island. Nearly 14 years ago, I co-founded the San Francisco Bay Flyway Festival. Since 2004 we have coordinated and served an annual Daffodil Tea to raise public awareness of St. Peter’s Chapel. In October 2007 together with long-time Shipyard worker, Larry Maggini, we founded the first of an annual service called the Mare Island Lost Boats Memorial. It honors the crews of the 7 submarines built at Mare Island and lost at sea during World War II. These are important opportunities to remember Mare Island’s historic naval and maritime heritage and to experience it “live”.

We have been evolving our purpose and realize through our hosting of the two 150th commemorative celebrations in 2007 and 2008, the Mare Faire and the Second Saturday Access Days at the Shoreline Preserve, that it is time to bring all of these events and programs together under an organization named the Mare Island Trust. You will hear more from the Mare Island Trust as we progress. In the meantime, rest assured that all of these Mare Island events and programs are projects of Arc Ecology whose IRS designated non-profit status assures that your contributions to our programs are considered tax-deductible to the extent allowed by law. That is good news for you and for us. We value your contribution of cash, equipment, in-kind services and volunteer support.
